

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A wireless network is established between a station and an access point for the network using a sequence of messages that securely transmit authentication information from the station to the access point for validation by the access point, and subsequently transmit a 5 shared key necessary to establish the wireless network from the access point to the station when the station is validated.

004860.1930960